TREK: R is for Resources

Academic and Career Advising continues an introduction of our new TREK rubric (Transition, Resources, Exploration, Knowledge) with a focus on campus resources. I am reminded, daily, how difficult it is NOT to succeed at Keene State College. In the past two months Study Nights, co-sponsored by the TRIO and Office of Disability Services offices, kicked off its second year. Graduate School Week, in early October, welcomed 37 graduate schools representing programs in arts and humanities, sciences and social sciences, professional studies, pre-law and pre-med. 27 Academic Departments participated in the Major Event in early October, an opportunity for all our academic departments to showcase their programs providing students an opportunity to explore majors and minors. We have just completed two full weeks of Drop In Course Registration Advising support in Mason Library where we saw over 950 students in 10 days, an increase of 200 students from last year. In late October we hosted the annual Jobs That Make a Difference Panel encouraging students to look at paths after college in the Peace Corp, City Year, Teach for America and numerous others. The residence halls are constantly providing programming and collaborating with other departments on campus to share resources and support students. Our Peer Tutorial Program received close to 500 requests for tutoring and tutoring matches are made daily. The Math Center and the Center for Writing are hopping and our Mason librarians are evident in numerous corners of campus providing research and media literacy support to all our students. The Rec Center is buzzing at all hours of the day with students working out individually, in groups, or in classes. The food is delicious in the Dining Commons. The Student Involvement Fair and the Study Away Fair happened in September reminding students we offer over 130 clubs and organizations and numerous locations to study beyond the walls of Keene State. And in late November we’ll welcome close to 60 employers representing non-profit and for profit organizations, businesses, and industries in our first of two annual Job and Internship Fairs. It is a vibrant campus with many people who care about our student’s well-being. It’s up to YOU, our students, to step up and grab the moment.
